“ God has added another angel in heaven to fly high and free...

“ It was heartbreaking and probably always will be that we were unable to see you run, jump and enjoy life in spite of this cruel world. Jesus chose you to remain in His arms for a reason we are yet to understand. As the song says jealous of the angels. Jenn has been and is very sick. This week has been the worst and the fight to live the hardest. It will be a short time for me here and I have a promise and faith of an eternal heavenly home. So many there are holding and loving you like we would have loved and spoiled you. God saw fit that you would be better remaining in his arms. So many prayers for you and your Mommy since the beginning. She gave everything she possible could for you to remain healthy. She felt you were battling but kept the faith and she misses and loves you every moment. A piece of her heart you took to heaven that day. Send her peace in her heart and be her lil angel until she someday comes home to be with you. As they lay your tiny body to rest we know your soul is already resting in the arms of Jesus in heaven. I will always remember the last ultrasound Becky sent me with those little arms and legs clear was beautiful and each one from the beginning kept getting more exciting. Lots of love Baby Lawsyn until we meet again. Watch over your Mommy and let her feel your love. I'll see you soon. May God bless your Mommy to find comfort knowing where you are. We were blessed to have you if only for a short time. Jenn, Larry and De
